Artist Marie Watt, along with the Denver Art Museum, the Peabody Essex Museum, and the Michael C. Carlos Museum at Emory University, invites you to donate a blanket and a blanket story for a new, monumental artwork. The new work will be part of Each/Other: Marie Watt and Cannupa Hanksa Luger, which opens at the Denver Art Museum on May 23, 2021 and will travel to the Peabody Essex Museum and the Michael C. Carlos Museum at Emory University.

The contributed blanket and its story will become a permanent part of the sculpture and cannot be returned. In exchange for a blanket and/or blanket story, Marie will mail you a small silkscreen print. Any condition of blanket, quilt, afghan, or blanket-like cloth is welcome.

Please print this form, fill it out, and mail it along with your blanket contribution. Please mail blankets and blanket stories to:

Marie Watt Studio
3806 SE 10th Avenue
Portland, Oregon 97202

---

Call for blankets

What is a blanket story?

Blankets are everyday objects. We take them for granted, yet as we use them, they quietly record our histories: a lumpy shape, a worn binding, mended patches. Every blanket holds a story.

In the secondhand and thrift-store blankets I use in much of my work, I can only guess at the story. But when I can work with contributed blankets, I ask each contributor to record the blanket’s story (or the contributor’s story as it relates to the blanket) on a tag. These stories remain with the blankets in their installations, and are also transcribed and collected, so that others can share them.

Sometimes, people want to contribute but don’t want to give up a beloved blanket. That’s fine, too. The story is the most important thing. You’re welcome to send a proxy blanket—one without a story, or without one related to you—along with your story.

Please write your name and mailing address below. This is so that we may send you your print and will not be part of the blanket story tag included in the sculpture.

---

Your name

Provenance of blanket

Blanket story

---

Your name

Address

City

State

Zip

---